Her most recent book in English, edited with Francesco Compagnoni, is Preaching Justice: Dominican Contributions to Social Ethics in the Twentieth Century (Dominican Publications, Dublin, 2007), and she is currently working on a companion volume, Preaching Justice II, on the work of Dominican sisters in social and economic spheres.

Sean Callahan

Sean Callahan is the Chief Operating Officer for Catholic Relief Services - USCCB, overseeing the Overseas Operations, US Operations, and Human Resources divisions, and ensuring fidelity to CRS’ mission to cherish, preserve and uphold the sacredness and dignity of all human life, foster charity and justice, and embody Catholic social and moral teaching. His role is to enhance performance, stimulate innovation, and position the Agency for the future.

Mr. Callahan was Executive Vice President for Overseas Operations from June 2004 to September 2012. In this role he provided oversight for a program and management portfolio which grew to over $800 million, served people in 100 countries, and engaged a team of over 4,500 staff.

As Regional Director for South Asia from January 1998 to May 2004, Mr. Callahan strengthened CRS' programming and partnerships in India, Pakistan, Afghanistan, Sri Lanka, Bangladesh and Nepal, and he was blessed to work closely with Mother Teresa and the Missionaries of Charity in Calcutta, represent CRS at the Asian Bishops Synod in 1998, and lead the regional response to floods, droughts, earthquakes, cyclones, and man-made emergencies. He also experienced a terrorist attack by the Tamil Tigers at the Sri Lankan airport, and he championed programming in Afghanistan during and after the Taliban.

Immediately prior to his assignment to South Asia, Mr. Callahan served as the Director of Human Resources for CRS at its world headquarters in Baltimore, and he previously served as the Director of the CRS/Nicaragua Program and worked in Central America and headquarters in varying capacities.

Mr. Callahan holds a B.A. in Spanish from Tufts University, Magna Cum Laude, and an M.A. in Law and Diplomacy from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University. He is married to Piyali Callahan, and they have two children – Sahana and Ryan.

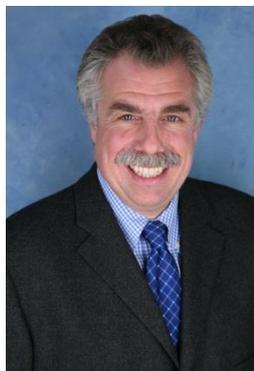

Shaun Ferris

Shaun's major area of work is focused on supporting smallholder farmers along the pathway to prosperity, as part of the Signature Program Area for Agriculture. Specific tasks include agro-enterprise development and value chain support, market research, developing marketing training materials and working with public and private sector agencies to develop new business models for inclusive market linkage.

Much of Shaun's work is focused on building the agro-enterprise capacity of field staff and finding ways of generating value at the farm level through new combinations of skills acquisition, technology, market opportunity identification and finding ways to improve information use and trading relationships. Shaun is currently working with a cross agency team on generating agro-enterprise content for cloud based distance learning systems and creating farmer facing business tools using ICT solutions.

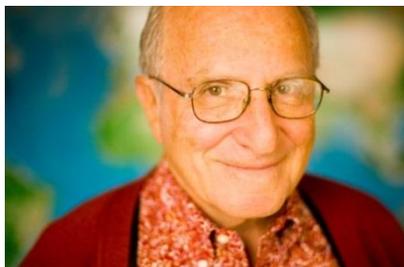

Over the past 22 years, Shaun has spent 16 years with the Consultative Group for International Agricultural Research and the past six and one-half years with the Catholic Relief Services. During this time Shaun has worked with several major agencies including USAID, World Bank, USDA, FAO, UNCTAD, DfID, IFAD and various country programs and projects.

Dr. Paul Polak

Dr. Paul Polak is Founder and CEO of Windhorse International and Paul Polak Enterprises, two corporations that will serve as a platform for the formation of new frontier multinationals. Dr. Polak is starting these new social ventures with the mission of inspiring and leading a revolution in how companies design, price, market and distribute products to benefit the 2.6 billion customers who live on less than $2 a day, combining radically affordable technology with radically decentralized supply chains to earn profits serving bottom billion customers.

The first division of Windhorse International, Spring Health Water (India), sells affordable safe drinking water to rural Indians through local kiosk owners using a simple electro-chlorination technology. Spring Health aims, within ten years, to reach at least 100 million customers who live on less than $2 a day.

The first division of Paul Polak Enterprises is SunWater, a company that is lowering the cost of photovoltaics by 80% in order to develop a solar pumping system that is competitive with 5 hp diesel pumps of which there are about 20 million currently used in India alone.

Prior to founding Windhorse International and Paul Polak Enterprises, Dr. Polak founded D-Rev: Design Revolution, a non-profit design incubator for technologies that serve customers living on less than $4 a day. In 1981, Dr. Polak founded International Development Enterprises (IDE), a non-profit organization that has brought nearly 20 million of the world's poorest people out of poverty by making radically affordable irrigation technology available to farmers through local small-scale entrepreneurs, and opening private sector access to markets for their crops.

Dr. Polak has been recognized by Scientific American as one of the world's leading 50 contributors to science, he was named Ernst and Young Entrepreneur of the Year for the western states, and received the Florence Monito Del Giardino award for environmental preservation in 2008. His work has been featured in articles in Business Week, the Economist, the New York Times, Forbes, and National Geographic. In 2009, he was named one of the world's "Brave Thinkers by Atlantic Monthly, along with Barack Obama and Steve Jobs, for being willing to "risk careers, reputations, and fortunes to advance ideas that upend an established order."

Dr. Polak's first book, Out of Poverty: What Works When Traditional Approaches Fail, has become a renowned resource for practical solutions to global poverty. His second book, The Business Solution to Poverty, published in 2013 with co-author, Mal Warwick has been adopted as a leading guide to profitable solutions to ending poverty on a truly large scale. Bill Clinton called The Business Solution to Poverty "one of the most hopeful propositions to come along in a long time."

Mirza Jahani, Ph.D.

Dr. Mirza Jahani is Chief Executive Officer of Aga Khan Foundation U.S.A. (AKF USA). Since joining AKF USA in November 2009, Dr. Jahani has focused on widening and deepening partnerships with US-based organizations, strengthening support to Aga Khan Development Network's (AKDN) civil society development portfolio and promoting impact investments for AKDN projects in Africa and Asia as a way to boost development resources and foster public-private partnerships. Before AKDN, Dr. Jahani served for 15 years as CEO of the Aga Khan Foundation in the United Kingdom, East Africa and Tajikistan, helping to conceptualize, implement and secure funding for programs in rural development, health, education, and civil society, often in post-conflict environments. Dr. Jahani began his career in the early 1980s as an economist with the United Kingdom's Department for International Development (DFID). He served with DFID again from 2004 to 2009 as Senior Governance Advisor in the Middle East, Central Asia, and the Democratic Republic of Congo. Dr. Jahani has also been an Economic Adviser to an African government.

Dr. Jahani was born in Uganda and educated at London, Harvard and Cambridge Universities, where he earned his doctorate in 2009. Dr. Jahani and his wife Nazira have two children, Rabia and Rumi.

Sal Giambanco

Sal leads the human capital and operations functions of Omidyar Network. In this role, he works to develop and scale the talent at Omidyar Network and its portfolio organizations. Sal brings a wealth of executive experience in human resources management to his role as a partner at Omidyar Network.

From 2000 to 2009, Sal served as the vice president of human resources and administration for PayPal and eBay Inc. Prior to joining PayPal, Sal worked for KPMG as the national recruiting manager for the information, communications, high-tech, and entertainment consulting practices, while also leading KPMG's collegiate and MBA recruiting programs. Previously, Sal directed human resources at Tech One, Inc. and held positions at Ernst & Young and ESS Technology, Inc. Sal began his career working in the public sector in a variety of roles, primarily in education and hospital ministries.

Matt Bannick

As managing partner, Matt leads all aspects of Omidyar Network's operations and strategy. He works closely with the co-founders and board of directors to ensure that Omidyar Network achieves its long-term mission and strategic objectives.

Matt brings a wide range of executive, international, and multi-sector experience to his leadership of Omidyar Network. From 1999 to 2007, Matt was a member of eBay Inc.'s executive staff and served in a number of senior executive roles. As the general manager and later as president of eBay International, Matt was largely responsible for building eBay's global footprint and driving phenomenal revenue growth. He grew the company's global presence from five countries in mid 2000 to 25 countries two years later. During that time, he grew international revenue from approximately $2 million per quarter to more than $100 million per quarter.

After eBay acquired PayPal in 2002, Matt was selected to be PayPal's first post-acquisition president and established PayPal as the global standard for online payments. Under his leadership, PayPal's revenue more than tripled in its first two years with eBay. In 2004, Matt returned to eBay International, increasing annual revenue to nearly $2 billion, which was nearly half of eBay marketplace revenue. Matt also spearheaded eBay's initiatives in Global Development and Citizenship, where he worked to bring the power of eBay to the developing world.

Prior to joining eBay, Matt served for four years as the North American president of NavTeq, the leading provider of digital map databases for the in-vehicle navigation system and online routing markets. Prior to joining NavTeq, Matt was a management consultant with McKinsey & Company, both in Europe and North America. Matt also served as a United States diplomat in Germany during the time of the fall of the Berlin Wall and German unification.

Matt currently serves on the boards of Bridge International Academies, Endeavor, the GIIN and Landesa. He earned an MBA with distinction from Harvard Business School and a bachelor's degree, Phi Beta Kappa, in international studies and economics from the University of Washington.

Mr. Schott successfully merged the firm he founded, The Schott Group, with CapTrust in 2007 to become one of the firms' current three managing principals. Mr. Schott worked on Wall Street in New York City in the 1980's at Drexel Burnham Lambert. While continuing his consulting career, he moved to Cincinnati and served as the chief operating officer of the World Champion Cincinnati Reds from 1988-1991, overseeing all aspects of team management and representing ownership. He is a graduate of Denison University with additional studies in business and finance at Warnborough College in Oxford, England. Furthering his studies, he completed an executive program on Investment Decisions and Behavioral Finance at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government. More recently, Mr. Schott completed the FBI Citizens' Academy and graduated from the program in May 2010. He now serves as a director for the FBI Miami Citizens' Academy Alumni Association.

Outside the office, Mr. Schott serves as the chairman of the Board of the Schott Memorial Foundation, as a trustee of the St. Pope John Paul II Cultural Center, and is a member of the Investment Committee of the Catholic Relief Services and Sacred Heart Major Seminary Foundation, a board member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, recently appointed as vice chairman of their National Advisory Board, and a board member of the BCS Orange Bowl Committee.

Mr. Schott has joined the Board of Directors of the SET SEG Educational Foundation and has also served terms on the Boards of Northern Michigan Hospital Foundation, the Ohio Sports and Law Commission, St. Thomas University and Law School and the National Catholic Partnership on Disability. In recognition of his commitment to professional excellence and contributions to the community, Mr. Schott was chosen as one of Cincinnati's outstanding Forty under 40 by the Cincinnati Business Courier in 1996. Mr. Schott has been a guest on CNBC and quoted in a variety of national publications such as USA Today, BusinessWeek and Forbes Magazine. He has also been interviewed as a guest on CNN Headline News' Newsmakers Segment.
